

Derelict crab trap clean-up set Monday, Jan 13

In partnership with local agencies, the Florida Department of Environmental Protection (FDEP) will hold a "derelict crab trap clean-up" at Steinhatchee's Deadman's Bay on Monday, Jan. 13.

The Taylor County Extension Office, the Taylor County Sheriff Office, the University of Florida Nature Coast Biological Station, U.S. Geological Service, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and Sea Hag Marina will be working alongside the FDEP to remove crab trap debris.

A total of five airboats with captains and two crews each will be navigating the muddy and marsh areas during the negative low tide.

The activity was permitted by the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC) and authorizes the removal of "derelict" crab traps.

Any stone crab or blue crab trap in the water during the closed season is considered a derelict trap and may be removed.

While the stone crab and blue crab seasons are currently open, derelict traps and debris can also apply to any fishable trap that lacks more than two of the following elements during the open season: buoy, line, a current FWC issued tag/identification or current license.

According to the FDEP, a total of 206 traps were removed from Deadman's Bay in 2017 and a total of 238 traps in 2019.

"These traps not only represent a navigational hazard, but also have ecological impacts, as they keep catching marine fauna in what is call 'ghost fishing' and include metal ions in the water as the trap wire rusts," Marine and Natural Resources Extension Agent Victor Blanco said.

For more information, contact the Victor Blanco at the Taylor County Extension Office at (850) 838-3508 or victorblancomar@ufl.edu.
