

Fiddler Crab Fest was a success

The 13th Annual Fiddler Crab Festival, which was held Feb. 12-14, was a success in spite of poor weather, according to organizer Pam Wessels.

"We managed to make a little money although invoices are still coming in. Entertainment was good on Friday night (Feb. 12) and drew a large crowd," Wessels said.

Saturday's weather put a damper on things in the late afternoon, so organizers decided to close the gate at 8 p.m., and entertainment shut down around 9 p.m.

While Sunday was "a wash," with continuous rain, "everyone there -- vendors, volunteers and attendees -- seemed to have a great time," Wessels said.

"Vendors were so thankful that we had the festival. I'd like to thank all of our volunteers and sponsors who helped make it a success," Wessels added.

the next time, Bobbi said, "No, you can just delete my number. You don't need to fish with me."

In addition to their charter business, the Bradys have recently added lodging as an option. When COVID-19 caused many businesses to close, the Bradys had just finished renovating one of the four rental units on their newly-purchased property, now known as Reds & Beds Lodge.

With over 30 charters and numerous lodging reservations canceled due to COVID, the Bradys worried about their future.

Now that businesses have reopened, Capt. Bobbi has been staying exceptionally busy between charters by cooking meals for some of her clients and cleaning the four rental units.

always hooks flying around on a boat. I could wear a low-cut top and probably get good tips, but I don't want to get hooked there," she explained.

With a grin on her face she adds, "Looks faded, but I'll still know how to fish."
