FARM REPORT

WITH DAVID CARLTON

Jan. 22:

Winter can be hard to deal with on the farm, with more to do and less time to do it.

I remember long ago, old folks telling me that "cold weather is hard on old people," and I reckon it's time for me to pass that on.

I put a quilt up across the foyer to keep the fireplace heat in the living room, so the family room with the computer and the herbs has been sorta cold and isolated.

That has led to me not writing like I should.

A few good folks have been concerned about how I've been doing, and the answer is mostly good -- up until a few days ago.

I have had some weak, achy feelings and flu symptoms, so I went yesterday for a test and will know the results on Monday.

I think it's just a bad cold, because I had to be out in raw weather. I am on the vaccine list, like most everybody else.

There is a break in the rain, and the cattle are up wanting hay.

I plan to try to haul a load of oranges with Johnny if it clears up enough.

There's a lot more to share, so I'll try to keep the quilt pulled back.

Jan. 23:

I'm up and moving around and feeling so-so.

Snyder was at the door at 8 a.m. wanting to help unload oranges and bum some money.

So, we did that, and I told him to let me alone, because I have a fine pot of chili made and some crooknecks to cook.

I like to pan cook them with pepper and onion and a little bacon...you know, get it all caramelized.

We failed on penning the cows Tuesday, and that sure sucks.

I wasn't at my best. My stomach feels much better though, and maybe the rest will soon follow.

Those yearlings will just have to keep.

Here's to good health to you all.

God loves you.

Jan. 24:

Mike, an old school buddy, is gonna come over with a couple of his dogs to help me with my cattle.

He said the cows have to be trained to work that way, and some herds are easier than others.

Anyway, I still haven't gotten my COVID test results back and will have to wait, probably 'till tomorrow afternoon.

I talked to my doctor yesterday, and he said he didn't think I have COVID or I would be very sick (my immune system is suppressed).

He could be wrong though. Doctors do make mistakes, and that's why we need hospitals.

So, it's nothing but good news on this end, and I just wanted to stay in touch.

Jan. 31:

This winter weather is just all over the place, but at least we haven't had it too cold lately.

I've been very busy with the cows, but I see some light up ahead -- the oranges are coming to an end soon, and I still have plenty of hay.

My friend Mike came over with Liz and two more dogs. It took about an hour and a half of hard work, but they penned up the herd.

I left them in there about two hours before I turned them back out after most of them had laid down.

We are going to do that a couple more times, and then we will pen them to sort and sell calves on Tuesday, Feb. 9.

Training them to work with dogs is the idea, but they are kind of hardheaded about it.

To quote Mike, "There's a better way than the one we was raised, David."

Anyway, it was the most entertainment I have seen in awhile -- better than a football game. Those dogs were amazing.

Feb. 4:

"And the morning breaks eternal bright and fair," as the song goes.

I'm getting a slow start finally after the house has warmed up.

I don't want to leave, but I need to get the last bins and trailer back to the grove.

Andy said to hold on to the tractor keys so I can improve his roads.

The good news is they are a mess -- I love that new tractor -- but he needs those bins back so he can wash them.

My steer pushed a cross fence over so I gotta fix that.

He will find himself at the sale barn Tuesday, Feb. 9.

"Yippy kye yay, get along little doggy. It's your misfortune and none of my own."

David Carlton grew up in Taylor County, where he worked on a Woods Creek Road farm in his youth. Decades later, he now owns that farm and spends his days tending to his cows and enjoying the country life.

David Carlton's calves were headed to the sale barn Tuesday, Feb. 9. Photographed on Dec. 16, 2020, Carlton said these silver and red calves were "meaner than a sow hog."
