

FARM REPORT

WITH DAVID CARLTON

Feb. 4:
Everything is rolling along like a slow-moving river. With a fish striking or a duck getting up here and there, it's easy to get caught up in the scenery.

My resolve to do more this year has been met with discord in the old sciatic nerve. It was causing a hitch in my rear portal area, making me lock up my brakes for a few days trying to stay warm and burning a ton of firewood.

I watched Doctor Zivago while convalescing and burned up even more, trying to warm up old Yuri. I really liked the movie, but its best watched in warm weather.

I had to put a hot wire across my cattle gap to stop Sizemore (my ox) from jumping it and getting in the ditch. He's two and a half years old now and bigger than most of the cows. I started feeding him sweet feed last week and he's a pest, interrupting a good midday nap and stirring up the neighbors (special thanks to Sherry and Deborah).

Anyway, this old farm will be waking back up in a hurry now, and there's plenty to be thankful for.

Feb. 7:

The barn loft museum scored two major additions over the weekend. April donated Grandma Mattie Futch Carlton's kitchen hutch yesterday, and I spent the afternoon cleaning it up and getting it up there.

I was glad for the new forks, because the old 5000 loader, which just made it high enough. Now I can fill the drawers and cubbies with relics from the past or anything that just looks old.

It's a good thing for those forks because the next antique going up is a 60's era dime Coke machine from the old Jackson Furniture building. Andy said it sells the short bottles. I still have to move it, so hang in there Ang, I'll get it as soon as soon as I can. Maybe even this afternoon, after hauling cow feed this morning.

Marvin's up there now, sitting in a rocker. I want to get Laura up to help me do some staging. Then you guys get to see a picture, so be my champion!

David Carlton grew up in Taylor County, where he worked on a Woods Creek Road farm in his youth. Decades later, he now owns that farm and spends his days tending to his cows and enjoying the country life.

David Carlton reports that he had to "put a hot wire across my cattle gap to stop Sizemore (my ox) from jumping it and getting in the ditch. He's two and a half years old now and bigger than most of the cows."
