

Beshears outlines duties of administrative personnel

With a series of new hires, appointments and transfers, each school in the district (with the exception of Steinhatchee School) will now have a dean, an assistant principal (AP) of curriculum and an assistant principal of discipline.

Superintendent of Schools Alicia Beshears shared how those roles will differ during discussions at last week's school board meeting.

"The role of a dean is really reactive – that's when a student has received a referral after a teacher has taken all the required steps and a student, for whatever reason, has to be removed from a classroom – that's consequence behavior. The role of the assistant principal is to be preventative -- to keep that behavior from even happening," Beshears said.

"The AP of discipline will be going to the classroom, looking at students that are the frequent fliers and teachers who may be writing a lot of referrals. We're looking at ways to make sure we are not just being punitive, but again preventative, trying to get to the root cause of the problems to not only decrease referrals, but to set up a culture that is more inclusive so that students know we are here to educate them. There are still going to be consequences -- they are not going out the door," she said.

"Just like an AP of curriculum will be meeting with teachers about their standards and how they teach to reach their students, an AP of discipline will also be going into the classroom.

"I just see these two roles – dean and AP of discipline – as being very different. There may be times the AP of discipline may have to help a dean with an investigation or if the sheer volume of misbehavior requires assistance. I have asked all principals to house their APs of discipline physically close to them and not physically close to the dean. I don't want them to be another dean. I want them to be a part of the leadership team that is going into the classroom, making those observations and meeting with students in small groups," Beshears said.

She also noted that by making a change to the job description for deans – adding a continuing education requirement – the district will be backing a "grow your own" strategy.

"In the past we have always said we were going to grow our own (teachers, administrators), but never really made any steps to do that. In revising the job descriptions for deans, we may hire someone who does not have their educational leadership degree to begin with, but in order to remain a dean, they will need to work toward that educational leadership degree, earning six hours a year, and continue to work toward obtaining that degree," Beshears stated.

"The idea of growing your own is that you start as a coach or a dean – and what we're talking about here is a dean – and (then move on) as an assistant principal of discipline, assistant principal of curriculum, then principal and then the sky's the limit," Beshears said.

By making the change to the job description for the dean position, "we are showing we are growing our own and that if you want to move forward in administration in Taylor County, you have to continue to get that education and work toward your masters in leadership so that you will have that ultimate goal of being an administrator," Beshears added.

"And you are giving them the avenue to do that," School Board Member Bonnie Sue Agner said.
